

People from across the area enjoyed the annual Williams Station Day Saturday in Atmore. Williams Station Day takes its name from Atmore's early history when in 1866 the community was a supply stop along the Mobile and Great Northern railroad.

Festival-goers were entertained by a wide variety of musical acts, plus there was plenty of food, storytelling for the kids, old fashioned displays like a cane mill and lots of shopping for arts and crafts.